

Masterpiece

Copyright A Bear & His Music / Dave Hebert (BMI) 1978, 2024.

The canvas lays there, lifeless, on the cluttered studio floor
The painter chooses carefully just the right tools for the chore
And going about his business with a style that's all His own
He starts another masterpiece and His prior work has shown
The Artist has a way with hues and tone

Now, some have taken quite some time while others quickly came
But in the Painter's eyes they're all His treasures, just the same
And every one's His workmanship, the product of His hands
And each is an expression of His time, His skill, His plans
The Artist's work is known throughout the land

(Bridge)

And sometimes I can see myself as canvas on the wood
Yielded to the Painter's view of what is right and what is good
Though I can hardly tell the changes taking place in me
I know the Master's molding what He wants for me to be

In time the work is done and He will place it in a frame
And hang it in a gallery and sign it with His name
So all that happen by can see the beauty in His art
And all can know the love the Painter's waiting to impart
To ev'ry masterpiece He's asked to start

The Master's hand is working in my heart
