

Maybe You're Not

Maybe I'm just being foolish and maybe a little naive
It may be you're right, all I need is perspective
The will to admit that I've just been deceived
Maybe my friends are mistaken or maybe they're not what I thought
And I'm just a loser pretending to win and dreaming is all this here loser has got
It could be it's all very clever, it could be I'm missing a lot
It may be that I'm betting wrong on forever
But maybe, just maybe, I'm not

Maybe you don't need forgiveness and maybe your life is a dream
You may be persuaded you've no need for mercy
Or maybe Eternity's not what it seems
Maybe there's no such thing as Heaven and maybe we're all doing fine
And evil is all just a callous illusion — religion is merely a crutch for the mind
It could be we die then it's over, it could be we'll all be forgot
So maybe you're smart to ignore what I'm saying
But maybe, just maybe, you're not

(Bridge)

It could be there's really no last judgment, it could be there's really no Hell
And maybe the Bible's an ancient example of how some will fall for a whimsical tale

Maybe there's no risen Savior and maybe the gospel's a ruse
And Jesus is simply a memory from childhood
And faith in a God-come-to-earth is for fools
It could be that Christ's not returning, it's just some ingenious plot
The fanciful dream of some foolish believers
But maybe, just maybe, it's not

(Coda)

And maybe you're willing to be lost forever
Or maybe, just maybe, you're not
